Paws Corner by Sam Mazzotta

DEAR PAW'S CORNER: I adopted a small mutt from the local shelter and named her "Moxie." She's adorable but really energetic. She'll actually jump straight up in the air as high as my waist! She also tugs hard at the leash when we walk. How do I tame all of this energy? - Janice F., Hyde Park, New York gratulations on your new pet! Moxie sounds like a bundle of joy. But I can understand that all her energy can be tiring. In addition to walks twice a day (or more, if you can swing it), give Moxie plenty of puppy toys to play with at home, and spend time with her on the floor just playing fetch and helping her work off more of that energy.

She may also respond very well to a consistent schedule of walks, feeding and bedtime (yes, bedtime). Build certain predictable routines around each of these events. When it's time for a walk, call Moxie and have her sit while you put on her leash. During walks, keep the leash short and work on the "heel" command. But when in a safe, open area, give Moxie more room on the leash to explore. When it's bedtime, create a routine that is the same every night - one that is positive, with a little play time and a signal to settle down and rest (such as turning down the lights).

Now, if Moxie's energetic behavior is morphing into something more serious, like destroying furniture or being aggressive toward other dogs or humans on walks, that's a problem you'll need to address as soon as possible. Talk to Moxie's vet about ways to reduce her hyperactivity and anxiety (if those are the causes). If she isn't responding to basic behavioral training, hire a trainer to help. 2024 King Features Synd., Inc.

Our Daily Bread

Generous Receivers

Read: John 4:1-15

How is it that You, being a Jew, ask a drink from me, a Samaritan woman?
—John 4:9

In today's Bible reading, we see Jesus weary, hungry, and thirsty. He was just as human as we are. He was also God and could have met all His own needs. But Jesus didn't insist on doing everything without the help of others. On this occasion He graciously (and no doubt gratefully) allowed His disciples to go and buy food while He sat by the well to rest and wait. And when a Samaritan woman of questionable character came to draw water, He did what many of us might hesitate to do—He asked her for a drink.

For years I missed an important lesson in our Lord's vulnerability, until He taught me, through a friend, the subtle selfishness of not letting others help us. One day this friend tried to do a kindness for me, and as usual I resisted. In frustration she said, "You know what? You're an ungenerous receiver!"

Instantly I saw it! Quite rightly, I had always tried to live by Jesus' words, "It is more blessed to give than to receive" (Acts 20:35). The trouble was, in the name of being unselfish, I always had to be the giver.

Others desire to experience the blessedness of giving, but we often frustrate their giving by refusing their help. Let's learn to be generous receivers—just like Jesus. By Joanie Yoder

Q: I have an L.C. Smith typewriter, serial number is "1386874B." Are old manual typewriters worth anything?
A: Lyman C. Smith and his brothers made guns before they made typewriters. They started making a few typewriters in their gun shop after 1884. In 1887, they sold the gun business and founded Smith Premier Typewriter Co. in Syracuse, New York. It became L.C. Smith & Bros. Typewriter Co. in 1903. The company merged with Corona Typewriter Co. in 1925 to become L.C. Smith & Corona Typewriter Co. Personal computers replaced typewriters in most homes, schools and offices beginning in the 1980s. Smith-Corona no longer makes typewriters; it now makes thermal labels. The serial number on your typewriter indicates it was made in 1937. Some old typewriters are collectible and sell for a few hundred dollars. A few rare typewriters sell for more than $1,000. Many common old typewriters sell for $20 to $50.
TIP: To clean furniture, dip your dusting cloth in 1/2 cup of vinegar mixed with a teaspoon of olive oil. ©2024 King Features Synd., Inc.

Turkey Vultures: Our Frequently Disregarded, Yet Efficient, Scavengers of the Sky

Boy, I hope you had better luck than we did with the Total Solar Eclipse. We were all set on Monday afternoon at 2 PM. We had our eclipse glasses to protect our eyes, reclining lawn chairs to make it easier to look up, and an unobstructed view of the sky from our own backyard. The gradual obscuration of the Sun by the Moon's shadow was progressing beautifully from roughly 2:10 PM to 2:35 PM. That's when extensive cloud cover suddenly rolled in from the West and completely blocked our view of this spectacular event. As we patiently waited for any glimpse of the Sun through the slightest break in the clouds, I initially observed three turkey vultures lazily circling at least 1,000 feet overhead. In a few minutes, they were joined by seven more, to make a gracefully soaring kettle of ten vultures, riding the thermal currents with minimal effort using their massive six-foot wingspans, like a choreographed dance.

We eventually had four 30-second to 1-minute glimpses of the eclipse through breaks in the clouds over the next 90-minutes, unfortunately none at totality. However, the turkey vultures' overhead aerobatics went on for almost 30-minutes, and prompted my Wife to quip, "Even though we're just sitting still in our chairs, I hope they do realize we are alive down here." While our Total Solar Eclipse viewing experience wasn't what we had anticipated (I do hope yours was better), those ten turkey vultures definitely got me thinking about my ongoing avian observations in 2024 and the simple fact it really seems like I'm seeing more turkey vultures in my travels than ever before. That got me thinking, why is that? Are there actually more turkey vultures out there or am I just paying more attention to their presence than ever before?

In my case, I think there is a simple explanation and it has to do with another species of birds. I've shared before how I'm blessed to see a bald eagle on just about a weekly basis nowadays. As I perpetually search for bald eagles, I find big birds with large wingspans immediately catch my eye. While I'm looking for the telltale white head and white tail feathers of a bald eagle, what more often has caught my eye is the "V-shaped" wing pattern and the splayed feathers at the wing tips (which look like fingers spread wide apart), two distinct signs readily identifiable from a distance that what you are looking at is a turkey vulture. Last Friday, I had to travel up to Pymatuning State Park to drop something off, and I not only saw one bald eagle up by Jamestown, but over four dozen turkey vultures throughout my trip.

The English language has some interesting names for groups of turkey vultures. If they are flying together, they form a kettle. If they are feeding on a carcass, they are referred to as a wake. (I'm not making this up!) And if they are together on a roost, you may hear them called a committee, venue, or volt. Adult turkey vultures have distinct, featherless red heads and the absence of feathers make them a little less messy in carrying out their primary function of scavenging on carrion (dead things). Turkey vultures do the "dirty work" of consuming dead animals, whether that may be an animal that died naturally, was road-killed, unfound by a hunter, or discarded by a farmer after its demise. By consuming carcasses, turkey vultures remove potential disease sources before they impact other animals or humans.

To help find deceased food sources, turkey vultures have keen eyesight and an exceptional sense of smell. You've probably heard how a shark can smell a drop of blood in the water a quarter of a mile away. Well, studies have shown a turkey vulture can smell Ethyl Mercaptan, a stinky gas given off by dead animals, from up to eight miles away. That is one of the primary reasons they soar about. Hoping to catch a whiff of Ethyl Mercaptan and then follow the odor in their circular flight pattern to its source. Once they find a potential deceased food source, turkey vultures use their hooked bills and talons to tear into the hide and flesh to consume their meals. Adult turkey vultures will eat their fill and then fly back to their young, where they regurgitate carrion for the nestlings to consume. Turkey vultures do not make nests, instead they typically lay two eggs on cliff ledges, in rotted logs or stumps, in abandoned buildings, or on the ground. They seek out secluded spots for their young, since the foul smell can attract predators.

Since our local area is transected by natural gas pipelines, one interesting fact you might want to remember is that Mercaptan is also the foul-smelling gas that is added to natural gas to make the otherwise colorless and odorless gas detectable. If you happen to see turkey vultures repeatedly circling over a natural gas pipeline, there may be a gas leak! They aren't glamorous and receive little respect, but turkey vultures do play an important role in our ecosystems. God Bless, Be Safe, and Great Outdoors!

- In Australia, weed whackers are called whipper snippers.
 - Newborn babies have nearly 100 more bones than full-grown adults.
 - Some libraries have been known to use extraordinary measures to ensure titles remained on shelves. A notable example is Marsh's Library in Dublin, Ireland, where in the 1800s, visitors desiring to peruse rare books were locked in cages until they finished reading!

• Bar soap is much more concentrated and eco-friendly than liquid body washes. These days, they are just as moisturizing as any liquid soap. Look for ingredients like shea butter or the words "ultra-moisturizing" and "added emollients."
• If you mount a magnet strip in your bathroom or on your vanity, you can use it to hold bobby pins or metal barrettes. Or mount a ribbon to hold all kinds of hair clips. ©2024 King Features Synd., Inc.
