Outdoor Opportunities

By COL (Ret.) Grey D. Berrier II

A Few Observations on the Most Common Avian Resident in the United States

Have you ever been engaged in a battle of wills? You know, an ongoing struggle where you want things your way and your counterpart wants what they want? Well, when I even bring that type of quandary up, your first thought, based on your own personal experiences, might be, "he's probably at odds with another adult, possibly a child, maybe a pet, or it could be some form of livestock?" Those would be good guesses, but they all happen to be incorrect at this time. My ongoing nemesis, actually I should say "our nemesis" because this rivalry has actually come to involve both my wife and our son, has been going on now for four weeks and is a daily grind against a single member of the most common bird species in the entire United States. You heard me right, we're at odds with a very persistent, male American robin.

You see, in the front of our home, to the left of the garage doors, is a light fixture almost seven feet off the ground and about two-feet down from the eaves of the garage roof. To be honest, the overhanging roof shields this particular light fixture from rain and even though the top of the fixture slopes somewhat, this particular bird has it in his mind that specific spot is the most ideal place in the world for him to build a nest in order to attract a lady robin. This battle of wills started back before Easter when we first started noticing grasses being piled on top of the light fixture. Each time we saw them, we would remove them, but he kept on trying to build there. Now, I remember my maternal grandmother having the same ongoing struggles with robins trying to build nests up under her front porch when I was a child. One of "the rules" I learned from Grandma was you can keep getting rid of their nesting attempts as much as possible in the construction phase, but once there are eggs in the nest, the robins win and you give them the opportunity to raise their family in spite of the minor inconvenience of discarded nesting materials and droppings.

Now, I've also learned the time frame from nest completion to the female depositing eggs can be mere hours, hence our ongoing efforts to discourage his building there. Twice he's woven grass with mud to the point where he's had the nest almost halfway completed, but we've removed it to discourage further efforts. All told, over four weeks, we've probably removed enough grass to almost fill a five-gallon bucket. My wife buys big containers of black pepper to sprinkle on our tulips and other flowers to discourage the deer from eating them (even right up alongside the house), so I decided last week to employ "chemical warfare" against Mr. Robin and sprinkled some black pepper on top of the light fixture. Well, most birds aren't known for their sense of smell (turkey vultures being a notable exception), but the smell of the pungent chemical compound piperine in the black pepper has significantly slowed down, but not eliminated, Mr. Robin's nest-construction efforts. Who knows how long our battle of wills will go on?

It probably wasn't the case when the first European settlers arrived in North America. The unbroken mature forest would not have been ideal habitat for American robins, which are members of the Turdidae or thrush family. However, over time, as the landscape changed to a mosaic of cities, towns, farms, parks, and other open spaces with intermittent trees and shrubs; and whether humans realized it or not; they created ideal habitat for American robins to the point they became and still are, our most common bird species in the United States. To drive this point home, most people recognize what a robin looks like and can also identify its distinct nest, and the color of their eggs (hence robin egg blue). Even if you think long and hard, there is probably no other species which most people know these three specific facts about.

While they have similar coloration, did you know you can usually tell a male from a female robin because the adult males have darker black heads, while the females' heads tend to be duller brown/gray? Because most people can recognize a robin, many field guides and online bird identification Apps start out with a basic question: is the bird you are trying to identify bigger, smaller, or the same size as a robin? A robin's diet consists of approximately 40% insects and earthworms, and 60% berries, fruits, and seeds. They go heavier on the insects and worms in the warmer month, and subsist almost totally on berries, fruits, and seeds when cooler. Contrary to popular belief, not all robins migrate south. In PA, they typically move to more densely wooded areas and move around in flocks. Robins are typically one of the first birds to start singing well before sunrise. Robins are territorial, so their vocalizations are often "trash-talking" with their neighbors and these interactions may result in aerial "dogfights" or clashes on the ground. Yes, robins are the "common man" of the bird world! God Bless, Be Safe, and Great Outdoors!

Paws Corner

by Sam Mazzotta

DEAR PAW'S CORNER: I adopted a sweet but somewhat rambunctious little mutt, "Karla," who is about 13 months old.
She wants to jump and bark at other dogs when we're out for a walk. How can I calm her down? –
Jen in Duluth, GA
DEAR JEN: Reactivity is natural behavior for a puppy that loves to play with other dogs, but of course, it's not desirable behavior. Jumping and barking can trigger an aggressive response from some dogs, or stress out other dogs. It can scare humans.

Fortunately, it's a behavior that you can moderate with a specific, daily training regime that will teach Karla to stay calm on the leash.

First, gather your tools: A sturdy leash that is about 5 feet long (no retractable leashes allowed), a harness and a pocketful of Karla's favorite treats, cut into tiny pieces. I recommend the harness over a collar because it allows you to strongly control Karla if she starts jumping, without risking an injury to her throat.

Next, teach and reinforce three crucial commands: sit, stay and heel. From the moment you put on Karla's harness and leash, to when you take them off at the end of the walk, she needs to follow your commands. Karla should sit calmly while you attach and remove the leash. During the walk, she should remain next to you, with a little slack in the leash. If she starts to tug ahead, stop, command her to sit and, once she sits, start off again, giving the command "heel."

Keep the training positive, and remember that it will take time and consistency. As she learns, Karla will become a great walking companion. ©2024 King Features Synd., Inc.

Our Daily Bread

True Greatness

Read: Luke 9:28-29,34-42

Now it happened on the next day, when they had come down from the mountain, that a great multitude met Him. —Luke 9:37

On the 50th anniversary of Sir Edmund Hillary's historic ascent of Mt. Everest, a television newsman said that much of Hillary's status as a hero in Nepal was "not about what he did when he stood on top of the world, but what he did when he came back down." After conquering the world's highest mountain with his climbing companion Tenzing Norgay in 1953, Edmund spent the next five decades helping to build schools, hospitals, and bridges for the Sherpa community.

The contrast between Edmund Hillary's moment on the mountain and his service in the valley brought to mind Jesus' experience on the Mount of Transfiguration (Luke 9:28-36). It was a pinnacle of blessing when our Lord's appearance became radiant and the Father said, "This is My beloved Son. Hear Him!" (v.35).

But Jesus didn't stay on the mountain. He came down to the crowd, where He freed a boy from an evil spirit. He was determined to go to Jerusalem and fulfill His mission, where He would willingly die on the cross for our sins.

Jesus told His disciples, "He who is least among you all will be great" (v.48). Our Lord's life shows us that true greatness is found in humbly serving God and others in the valley of need. By David C. McCasland

Whether on the mountaintop Or the valley down below, True greatness is in serving Wherever we may go. —D. De Haan

In God's eyes, true greatness is serving others.

Recipe Corner

Simple Macaroni and Cheese

8 oz. box elbow macaroni
1/4 C. butter
1/4 C. all-purpose flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
Ground black pepper to taste
2 C. milk
2 C. shredded Cheddar cheese

•Bring a large pot of lightly salted water to a boil. Cook elbow macaroni in the boiling water, stirring occasionally until cooked through but firm to the bite, 8 minutes. At the same time, melt butter in a saucepan over medium heat. Add flour, salt, and pepper and stir until smooth, about 5 minutes. Pour in milk slowly, while stirring continuously. Continue to cook and stir until mixture is smooth and bubbling, about 5 minutes, making sure the milk doesn't burn. Add Cheddar cheese and stir until melted, 2 to 4 minutes. Drain macaroni and fold into cheese sauce until coated. Serve hot and enjoy!

• It's tough to eat home-cooked meals as a single eater. Most recipes are geared for multiple portions, and you probably don't want to eat the same thing for five days straight. Try this: Get together with some friends and have a potluck. Each guest brings an entree and at least two side dishes, in extra-large portions, and his or her own leftovers containers. Split the food up amongst the guests, packaged as meals. Everyone can cook once and eat for a week.
