Life Changes When You Lose Your Hearing

Being an advocate for helping the hearing impaired has brought me to where I am today. Hearing is so very important. Now that I am myself a hearing aid wearer I realize even more what people miss when left untreated. My promise is to fit you with a hearing aid and have it perform to it's ultimate capability for your lifestyle and needs. My testing, prescribing and selecting hearing aids that will accomodate your needs as well as your budget is what I do best. My recent nomination for "Best of the Best" contest gives me the confidence that I am doing just that.

Thank you so much for your vote.

Strange But True

by Lucie Winborne

• Native Americans planted "Three Sisters" – corn, beans and squash – together for their mutual benefit. Corn provided a structure for the beans to climb, beans provided nitrogen to the soil, and squash spread along the ground, preventing the growth of weeds.

Spotted Lanternfly – Swat, Stomp, and Scrape Are Appropriate Responses (Part 1 of 2)

“Know thy self, know thy enemy, a thousand battles, a thousand victories.” You may recognize this familiar quote from the Chinese general, military strategist, and philosopher Sun Tzu. His work, “The Art of War,” from the 6th century BC was required reading during my military education and is frequently included in many business curriculums. You may not know this, but we all have an enemy amongst us right now. A foreign invader from Asia, who was first sighted on Pennsylvania soil in 2014 in the southeastern corner of the state, and has now spread to 52 of the Commonwealth’s 67 counties over the past ten-years. Sun Tzu’s wisdom tells us, “know thy enemy,” so I want to familiarize you with this unwelcome, invasive species, the Spotted Lanternfly (SLF). What started out as a PA problem (it is believed SLF egg masses were unknowingly imported on Asian products brought in through international trade) has spread to 13 other states including: Connecticut, Delaware, Indiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Rhode Island, Virginia, and West Virginia.

The Spotted Lanternfly, Lycorma delicatula, is a planthopper and the problem with this invasive species is it feeds voraciously on many important plant species, such as grapevines, hops, ornamental nursery and backyard plants, and many common, economically beneficial trees, like maples and black walnuts. SLFs do not bite or sting, so the threat isn’t to humans directly, like it is with mosquitos or ticks. The concern with SLFs is they feed on certain plants in such high numbers and with such intensity that they are plant stressors, causing the attacked plants to be severely weakened and susceptible to other stressors, such as diseases, weather, and other insects. When SLF was initially detected in southeastern PA, one big concern was the potential economic impact on the many orchards found in that region. If you look at a map of the 52-counties where SLFs are now found in PA, the “Quarantine Zone” (QZ) as named by the PA Department of Agriculture (PDA), you will note the 15-counties currently not within the QZ are those counties stretching across the northern tier of the Commonwealth. In the northwestern corner, it includes Clarion, Crawford, Erie, Forest, Jefferson, Venango and Warren Counties. One major concern is SLFs will eventually reach Erie County and threaten the economic viability of the vineyards near Lake Erie.

I saw my first SLFs while visiting family in Eastern PA, back in 2018. I quickly learned from my loved ones that you immediately stomp on any SLFs you see on the ground and swat them out of the air whenever possible, which typically requires the follow-up stomp to complete their destruction. This past Summer, I was down in Allegheny County on August 5 (near West Mifflin) and August 10 (up on Mt. Washington), and I can only describe the scene as an infestation, since mature SLFs covered the sides of buildings and trees, and it was hard to walk without stepping on them. I have subsequently learned the life stages of the SLF and allow me to pass them along to you, so you know what you are looking at and what to look out for. Here in PA, SLFs go through one life cycle per year. The adults lay egg masses in the Fall (Sep. thru Nov.) on trees, rocks, houses, outdoor equipment, etc. An egg mass looks almost like dabbed on white, gray or brown mud and the 2-inch long, well-camouflaged cluster typically contains 30 to 50 eggs. Those eggs hatch between Apr. and Jun. (it’s happening right now!) and the SLF young go through three instars (growth stages) where they are black with white spots and increase from 1/8 to 1/4-inches. When they reach their fourth instar in Jul. thru Aug., they grow to 1/2-inch and turn an easily identifiable red on their backs with intermittent white spots. (Easy to spot and kill!) The adults start to emerge in late Jul. and can be seen any time until Dec. (When they are killed by a hard freeze). The adults are about 1-inch long with outer wings covered by black spots with a pinkish or reddish background over the front 2/3’s of the wing. Their underwings are distinctly red with black spots (clearly visible when their wings are extended or in flight, while their thoraxes have black and yellow stripes, almost like a bumblebee.

It is believed SLFs have primarily spread across PA as “hitchhikers”, since young, adults, or egg masses have traveled by highway (latched on to cars, trucks, and buses) or rail (attached to trains) coming out of Eastern PA. The big concern is they will continue to spread that way to the remaining 15-counties. I highly encourage you to go to Penn State Extension’s website and read through the Spotted Lanternfly Management Guide for good photos, illustrations, and more information. Next week, we’ll explore what we can each do to help fight this invasive enemy amongst us! God Bless, Be Safe, and Great Outdoors! ©WBB 2024

Our Daily Bread

Correct Them

Why do you . . . honor your sons more than Me, to make yourselves fat with the best of all the offerings of Israel My people? —1 Samuel 2:29

Read: 1 Samuel 2:12,27-36

Therapist and mother Lori Gottlieb says that parents who are obsessed with their children's happiness may actually contribute to their becoming unhappy adults. These parents coddle their children, do not equip them to deal with the real world, look the other way when their children do wrong, and neglect disciplining them.

In 1 Samuel, we read that the high priest Eli sometimes looked the other way. We don't know what he was like as a father when his boys were young. But he failed to properly deal with their behavior as grown men serving in God's temple. They were selfish, lustful, and rebellious, putting their own needs ahead of God's Word and the needs of the people. At first, Eli rebuked them but they would not listen. Instead of removing them from service, he looked the other way and let them continue in their sin. As a result of his sons' sins and because Eli honored his sons above the Lord (1 Sam. 2:29), the Lord warned Eli that his family would suffer judgment (v.34; 4:17-18).

As Christian parents, we have the awesome responsibility to lovingly discipline our children (Prov. 13:24; 29:17; Heb. 12:9-11). As we impart God's wisdom to them, we have the blessing of helping them develop into responsible, God-fearing adults.

They are buds of hope and promise, Possessed by Him whose name is Love; Lent us here to train and nourish for a better life above. —Crosby

Now Here's A Tip

by JoAnn Derson

• "I found a bunch of guttering at a garage sale super cheap, and was inspired to bring it INSIDE my house. I purchased end pieces at my local hardware store and cut the gutters to fit inside my closet. They line the wall all the way up in horizontal rows. I use them to keep shoes, purses, even small baskets of accessories. It's wonderful. - T. in Tennessee ©2024 King Features Synd., Inc.
