Spotted Lanternfly – Swat, Stomp, and Scrape Are Appropriate Responses (Part 2 of 2)

Looks can be deceiving and a name doesn't tell the entire story.

Those two simple phrases are definitely applicable when it comes to the Spotted Lanternfly (SLF). In their first three larval phases (called instars), the black with white spots SLF nymphs are only 1/8-inch to 1/4-inch and are often mistaken for some form of beetle after they emerge and progressively grow from Apr. through Jul. I have heard "attractive" used to describe their fourth and final larval stage when they turn red with white spots and reach 1/2-inch in length, typically in Jul. and Aug. While, some have gone so far as to label the flying adults of this invasive species "handsome", since the 1-inch long planthoppers have two prominent bright red patches on their heads, black spots on their pinkish forewings and very red hindwings, and black bars on their yellow abdomens, when they emerge in late Jul. and Aug. before prolifically laying eggs Sep. to Nov.

It would be more accurate to think of them as "wolves in sheep's clothing", since their aggressive feeding on flora is bad for backyard plants, our native ecosystems, and our vital agricultural economy. They feed on over 70-species of plants, depleting the plants' energy reserves and costing hundreds of millions of dollars in lost agricultural production. As one Weekly Bargain Bulletin staff member accurately pointed out when I forwarded him my outdoor column last week, "they should have given the invasive Spotted Lanternfly a more menacing name, since SLF actually sounds fun" to the general public, but clearly doesn't tell the entire story. The nymphs, when they first emerge, can be easily be mistaken for ticks, and the adults are occasionally misidentified as some of our native moth species, but these Asian invaders are not welcome in Pennsylvania or any other American soil, for that matter. Now, if the facts they could damage the trees, ornamental plantings, or garden plants on your property, or threaten our food supply is not enough to make you want to take action, possibly the juicy tidbit that their excrement, called "honeydew," rains down in abundance when there is an infestation and will put a gross, sticky coating on your deck, sidewalks lawn furniture, and vehicle(s) that can be a chore to remove and the sweet substance also attracts bees and wasps. Yes, SLF "poop" is a headache, you probably don't want to deal with.

Our youngest daughter lives and works in Allegheny County. She took to our family chat this past weekend to inform us she killed her first two SLF nymphs of 2024. The battle is on! I encourage you to look at photos online to ensure you can properly identify a SLF in the various phases of its life cycle (we don't want to be eliminating other potentially beneficial native insect species), so you too can begin stomping on SLF nymphs or adults when you see them, swatting flying adults that enter your airspace, or scraping the camouflaged egg masses off of natural objects or manmade items whenever you find them. When the SLF first arrived in Pennsylvania in 2014, it had no natural enemies or predators. There is some evidence a few of our native birds and mammals have subsequently learned to prey upon the SLF, in its various life forms. Entomologists from the PA Dept. of Agriculture (PDA), the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture (USDA), Penn State University (PSU), and other research colleges/universities have explored the possibility of releasing natural predators that coexist with the SLF in its native habitat (i.e.: Asian wasp species) or native land SLF pathogens (bacteria, virus, or microorganism causing disease) to attack the SLF and keep it in check without harming native insect species. Focused natural SLF control means are definitely preferred to indiscriminate pesticide applications, which can also harm native insect species and could potentially accumulate in the bodies of birds, mammals, or even fish further up the food chain.

This time of year, many individuals from our area are looking to head to PA's Northern Tier to possibly turkey hunt, trout fish, hike, camp, visit the Allegheny National Forest, or explore one of our PA State Parks or State Forests, or spend time at their family camp. Don't be "that guy" or "that girl" who unknowingly lets the SLF (either as a nymph or egg mass at this time) hitch hike on your vehicle, boat, trailer, or RV and become established in one of the 15 PA counties currently outside PA's SLF Quarantine Zone. Please do your "due diligence" and look for hidden hitchhikers before hitting the road. If you have any additional questions about SLF, please do not hesitate to call the Penn State Extension Office at the Lawrence County Courthouse, (724) 654-8370, or your corresponding county's office to talk to an SLF expert. You can also visit: extension.psu.edu/spotted-lanternfly or call 1-888-4-BADFLY for more info. Be an active adversary of the Spotted Lanternfly! God Bless, Be Safe, and Great Outdoors!

Mother's Law
Read: Proverbs 6:20-24

My son, . . . do not forsake the law of your mother. Proverbs 6:2

As I read Proverbs 6:20, which refers to "the law of your mother," I recall some of my mother's unique "laws" that have helped me
many times.

The first I call "the law of the warm kitchen." When we got home from school on a cold winter's day or when the holidays rolled around, the kitchen was always so warm from baking and cooking that the windows were steamed. It was also warm with a mother's love.

A second law I call "the law of a mother's perspective."
When I would come to her all upset over some childish matter, she would often say, "Pay no attention."
Or, "Ten years from now you'll have forgotten all about it." That helped me put things into perspective.

But above all was my mother's "law of faith." She had an unswerving trust in God that kept her strong and gentle amid the fears, pressures, and sacrifices of the war years and of the 1950s.

Mom's been with the Lord now for many years. Yet I'm still grateful for her "laws," because they have helped me through many difficult days.

Christian mother, you too are writing "laws" for your children. Are they worth remembering? by David C.
Egner

I love you, Mother, for your quiet grace, For that dear smile upon your kindly face, For marks of toil upon each loving hand That worked for me ere

I could understand. —
Simpson

SUBS - Fresh & Ready

Now Here's A Tip

by JoAnn Derson

- Buff spots off of silver with toothpaste. Rub gently with a soft cloth, rinse and dry.
 - Add shredded veggies to tomato sauce to up the veggie quotient. Many vegetables can be added without adding many calories and will not change the taste that much. Try carrots, squash or sweet potatoes. You can even add a tablespoon or two of canned, pureed pumpkin.
