Realism And Romance
Husbands, love your wives . . . Let the wife see that she respects her husband. —Ephesians 5:25,33
Read: Ephesians 5:22-33

Good marriages have a balance. The practical realities of daily living are enhanced by the joy and spontaneity of continually falling in love with each other.

Realism can help a husband to see that he is taking his wife for granted and is not being sensitive to her feelings. It can cause a wife to see that her critical comments are tearing down her husband's self-respect.

Realism is not enough, however. Romance, often discarded after the wedding, keeps a marriage from growing dull. It can prevent the kind of situation depicted in the cartoon of an elderly couple sitting on the front porch of their home. The husband is saying, “Sometimes, Sarah, when I think of how much you mean to me, I can hardly keep from telling you so.”

Paul's words in Ephesians 5 encourage a love between two people that reflects Christ's self-sacrificing devotion to His church. In addition, it's a love filled with kindness and tenderness.

Whether you're dating or have been married half a year or half a century, Christ can help you balance your relationship with realism and romance. Keep drawing on His love and see what it does for your marriage. by Dennis J. De Haan

Despite the faults that partners have,
Their marriage still can thrive;
But both must look to God for help
To keep their love alive. —JDB

The bonds of matrimony aren't worth much unless the interest is kept up.

Strange But True
by Lucie Winborne

- England's King Richard the Lionheart spent a mere six months of his 10-year reign in England, being there only briefly in 1189 and 1194.
- Obituary writers have their own awards, which are called The Grimmys.
- Elton John has pianos named after Aretha Franklin, Nina Simone and Diana Krall.
- There's a five-story, blood-red waterfall in Antarctica.
- Beethoven went out of his way to ensure his morning coffee was made with exactly 60 beans per cup.

Strange But True

by Lucie Winborne

• The NASA Vehicle Assembly Building in Florida is so huge it has its own weather.

• The modern popped collar originated as a way to keep tennis players' necks from getting sunburned.

• In 1897, Indiana state legislators tried to pass a bill that would have legally redefined the value of pi as 3.2.

• The fastest knockout in pro boxing history occurred when Mike Collins floored Pat Brownson with his first punch and the match ended a mere four seconds after the bell.

• A game show in Japan featured one item in a room that was replaced with a look-alike item made of chocolate or other candy. Contestants would try to find it by biting into various objects.

• During World War II, the term "security blanket" was slang for measures meant to keep military information secret, or covered up.

DEAR PAW'S COR-NER: My dog "Austin"

was recently diagnosed with Lyme disease. He's responding very well to treatment with antibiotics. Still, I'm wracking my brain as to how he was exposed. I check him for ticks every time we go out hiking, and I've never found one. I avoid trails in the deep woods during the summer months, when there's a lot of brush and ticks are out. What can I do to protect him from another tick bite? - Zack in Asheville, North Carolina
DEAR ZACK: I'm glad to hear Austin is on the mend! Lyme disease in dogs can be very debilitating. The most important tool in the tick-fighting arsenal is prevention. Use a flea and tick preventive treatment - like a topical ointment or a chewable medication - to arm your dog in advance of going outside. Oral treatments often have the added advantage of heartworm medication to prevent this dangerous transmitted disease in dogs from fleas and mosquitoes.

Avoiding the deep woods in summer is one way to reduce the chance of acquiring a tick (or three, or four), but ticks can lurk right in your yard and around the neighborhood. Keep the lawn mowed and brush trimmed back, and remove any debris piles around your property. Vacuum carpets weekly and sweep and mop the floors regularly.

Check Austin every day for ticks, even on days that you don't go out hiking. It's not unheard of to miss a tick in a dog's fur, before it's latched on to the skin - and you have a 48-hour window to locate and remove an attached tick before Lyme exposure occurs.

Finally, talk to the vet about whether a Lyme vaccine would be a good choice for your dog.

Outdoor Opportunities

By COL (Ret.) Grey D. Berrier II

Enjoy Each Part of the Hunt: Before, During, and After (Part 2 of 6)

When Donovan Karki, the Keynote Speaker at First Baptist Church's 20th Annual Sportsmen's Dinner, shared he is like a "kid on Christmas Eve" the night before opening day of our various hunting seasons, I'm sure I wasn't the only one who thought "Me Too!" in my mind. I could totally relate to the eagerness, anticipation, difficulty sleeping, and dreaming of what's to come in the morning. We are on the cusp of the opening of our 2024 PA statewide archery deer season on Sat., Oct. 5, and there are a lot of archery hunters chomping at the bit to get out in the woods. So, as a reminder to all our hunters, in addition to being interesting information for everyone else, I'm going to share key points this week in the category: "Before Heading to the Woods," and specifically the subcategory: "Gear/Equipment Preparation."

Having all your gear and equipment ready to go before the hunt won't insure success, but not having the proper equipment with you or having your gear fail when you need it to work properly can be the reason why you fail to fill your tag and return home empty handed. So, to avoid unneeded frustration and potential failure, here are several things to consider. Get all your gear assembled, don't wait until the last moment. We all know "the procrastinator" who will be looking for their hunting license, flashlight, or other key items after waking up on opening morning. Check out the serviceability of your gear and clothing. If it needs repaired or replaced, do it before the season starts and you suddenly realize your range finder or another item isn't working properly. Shop now for what you need and take it with you. There is a reason why Sheetz and other convenience stores stock gloves and orange hats. It's because many hunters forget theirs and need to stop in to pick up replacements on the way to their hunting spot.

Carefully inspect your tree stands, climbing sticks, and all your straps and cables. You're going to be trusting them with your life when you are well above ground level, so look for any mechanical defects and replace any item that shows wear, weathering, or deterioration. Additionally, carefully inspect your safety harness, practice putting it on properly, have it with you when hunting above ground, and bottom line: wear it for your own piece of mind and your loved ones. Sharpen your knife and either sharpen or replace the broadheads on the "business end" of your arrows or bolts. As a rule, I personally only use a broadhead once to harvest a deer and after that, it becomes a practice broadhead for shooting into my block target. Don't forget "essential gear" that you have to have to make your firearm, muzzleloader, bow, or crossbow function. For firearm hunters, I'm talking the proper ammunition (caliber, bullet type, shot size, lead or steel shot, etc.). While archers need to remember their quiver of arrows or bolts (I know two individuals who didn't). Bow hunters who use a release need to have it with them and crossbow hunters need to bring their cocking device, in addition to putting rail lubricant and string wax on before cocking their crossbow. If you are a muzzleloader hunter, don't forget your ramrod, like I did, or at least know the proper depth to seat a powder charge and patched roundball/projectile, so you can make a "field expedient" ramrod from a straight branch, like I did this past flintlock season for a reload while afield.

Beforehand, think about tick prevention and treat your clothing with Permethrin or another tick repellent. Check the batteries in your optics, flashlight, rangefinder, and other electronic gear. Carry an extra 2032 battery for your red dot or scope, it may save your hunt or someone else's. Bring your contacts or eyeglasses, if you need them, and treat your glasses with anti-fog (shaving cream works). Place a piece of black electrical tape over the barrel of your firearm or muzzleloader to keep out moisture and debris. Tie pieces of nylon thread on your firearm, muzzleloader, bow, crossbow, and tree stand to constantly check the wind direction. Take the time to use the necessary soaps, detergents, and cover scents to address scent elimination and scent containment. If you are heading to the "Big Woods," carry navigation aids, whether that's map & compass, GPS, or satellite device, because cellphone service isn't always available in remote PA to use a smartphone App. Bring the necessary recovery tools: drag rope, drag harness, deer cart, ice fishing or child's plastic sled, come-along, pulley, etc. to get your deer or especially a bear out of the woods. Always carry minimal survival gear, like a lighter, space blanket, chem lights, and trash bag in case you or someone you come across needs to spend an unanticipated night out in the woods. Remember your seat cushion, since the mind can only absorb what the backside can endure, and rocks, logs, and the ground get uncomfortable quickly. There is a lot to get ready! God Bless, Be Safe, and Great Outdoors!

Antiques and Collecting
by Terry and Kim Kovel

Q: I inherited my grandfather's collection of early American pressed glass. He had over 100 pieces, of various patterns. I am not a collector and would like to sell these beautiful items. Any suggestions?

A: Pressed glass, also called pattern glass, is a popular collectible. Pieces are usually inexpensive, but rare patterns by known makers can sell for hundreds, even thousands of dollars. Pressed glass sells well online, at general antiques shows and at small local auctions, but if you are planning to sell the entire collection, you may want to find an auction that specializes in antique glass. Collectors' clubs can help you find more information and possibly connect you with buyers. The Early American Pattern Glass Society (www.eapgs.org) is a good place to start. Or look for a glass club in your area. ©2024 King Features Synd., Inc.

Now Here's A Tip

by JoAnn Derson

• Remove scuff marks from hard-surface floors (wood, linoleum, tile) with a clean tennis ball. If your floor has many scuffs, you can poke a hole in the tennis ball and insert it on the top of your broom handle. When you hit a scuff, flip your broom over and rub. Most come off right away!
