Outdoor Opportunities

By COL (Ret.) Grey D. Berrier II

It's Bad Out There, Are You Prepared to Battle Ticks Before They Bite You? (Part 2 of 2)

Stunned. Alarmed. Angry. These were some of my emotions when I initially got the news. It was June 2008 and I was 3-months into my new assignment as the Garrison Commander of Fort Indiantown Gap. During a weekly staff meeting, a representative from our Medical Clinic shared startling information. It was Installation Policy any tick removed from a soldier at the Clinic, in a Battalion Aid Station, or by a medic was to be put in a vial and turned in for testing. As part of his briefing, he stated they had already tested over 350 ticks removed from soldiers in 2008 and 58% of the ticks had tested positive for Borelia burgdorferi, the spirochete bacterium that can be transferred to humans by black-legged ticks (AKA deer ticks) and cause Lyme disease. I had no idea over 50% of the ticks there could potentially transmit Lyme disease. It didn't mean that high of a percentage of the soldiers contracted Lyme disease, because soldiers were instructed to conduct regular "Tick Checks," and the vast majority were removed by medical personnel well-before the tick was attached for 24-hours. However, the potential, if gone undiscovered, for soldiers who had tick bites to contract Lyme disease existed and warranted proactive vigilance.

I have no idea what the percentage of black-legged ticks in our area carry the Borelia burgdorferi bacteria. I don't know if anyone has tested ticks around here to find out. But even if it is one-half (29%) or only one-quarter (14.5%) of what we found at Fort Indiantown Gap, I don't like the odds of potentially contracting a debilitating and possibly life-threatening tick-borne illness. Now, I'm not a medical or veterinary professional, so I have to include a disclaimer. The information I'm going to share is for informational and educational purposes and is based on my own experiences and what I have learned from others. If you have a medical or veterinary question regarding ticks, please consult a professional.

The guidance I've read says the threat of acquiring Lyme disease goes up significantly when the tick has been attached for 24-hours and has been feeding on your blood. The Borelia burgdorferi bacteria gets transferred in the tick's saliva, which serves as an anticoagulant to keep the blood flowing. There is the perpetual warning to look out for the tell-tale "Bullseye-shaped Rash," but not everyone gets the distinct rash. That is why thorough "Tick Checks" are so important after returning from outdoors. Ticks like to attach themselves where you can't see them: behind your knees, back of your arms, or your waistline on your sides. In our Oct. 2024 bear muzzle-loader season, I came home to find one attached at the base of the pinky and ring finger of my right hand. Getting any tick off as soon as practical is important. You can use tweezers, forceps, tick "pliers," or the tear-shaped tick-removal tools to slowly and steadily pull the tick off without tearing its head off or crushing it (that could potentially force more saliva inside you).

I start by dousing the attached tick with a hydrogen peroxide soaked cottonswab. I find the "burn" of the hydrogen peroxide causes a visible reaction from the tick and they will often release on their own. If not, I go with the slow and steady pull to remove the tick intact. I have a special next-step for my ticks. I have an old tuna-fish can ticks go into and then they get sprayed with Permethrin to cause their demise. I immediately treat the tick bite with more hydrogen peroxide, followed by Neosporin (an antibiotic ointment to prevent infections). Then my tick bites get a dab every few hours of Walmart-brand Clearasil with its 10% benzoyl peroxide. I was told the benzoyl peroxide which kills the bacteria under the skin that causes acne will also help kill any Borelia burgdorferi bacteria the tick might have left. I personally don't use the 24-hour rule to seek medical attention. If I think a tick has been attached for more than 12-hours, I'm going to seek medical attention for a prescription for doxycycline or another effective antibiotic. I have been tested multiple times for Lyme disease and they have come back negative. Several individuals I know have not been so fortunate. If I had a family member or friend with an undetermined medical condition, I would recommend a Lyme disease test, since it can manifest itself in a myriad of symptoms.

Like most dogs, our dog takes monthly oral flea and tick medication. However, they work by letting ticks bite and then die from the medicine in the dog's blood. As a proactive measure, I spray our dog weekly with a dilute solution of Permethrin made by mixing 1-ounce of the Gordon's 10 Livestock and Premise Spray (10% Permethrin) with 100-ounces of water. This dilute concentration is similar to the flea and tick dips available at pet/farm stores. It is safe for dogs, but not cats. Do all you can to keep yourself, those you love, and your pets safe from ticks this year!

Kovels

Antiques and Collecting
 by Terry and Kim Kovel

Q: I recently found a teapot that is shaped like an old country cottage, and it is marked on the bottom as made in Occupied Japan. What does that mean, and could it be worth something?

A: "Occupied Japan" is the mark on ceramics, toys and other items made in Japan during the American occupation after World War II, about 1947 to 1952. There are collectors who specialize in Occupied Japan products. To them, the mark is the most important part; at antiques shows, Occupied Japan items are displayed upside down so the mark is immediately visible. Novelty ceramics like your teapot tend to sell for low prices. We have seen a similar teapot, along with a matching sugar bowl and creamer, sell recently for about $20. This style of teapot, shaped like a cottage, is sometimes called "cottage ware." We have seen it attributed to the Marutomu ceramics company.

DEAR PAW'S CORNER:
 My partner and I are first-time campers, planning to go on our first outing in late May at a state park. We have an adult dog, "JayJay," who will come along with us. What tips do you have to keep him safe and having fun all weekend? - Kerry in Atlanta

DEAR KERRY: Camping with your dog can be a lot of fun if you prepare correctly. Keep some key points in mind:
 - Make sure your dog doesn't bother other campers.
 - Ensure that your dog is leashed and under control at all times.
 - Clean up after your dog.
 - Make sure your dog has ample water, food and bedding.

©2025 King Features Synd., Inc.
 One way to prepare is to set up a test camp in your backyard, if you can. Set up your tent and set out all of the items you'll be using during the outing - cooler, chairs, stoves, etc. Put JayJay on his leash and walk him all through the mock campsite, and into the tent, so that he gets familiar with all of these things. Then roll out your sleeping mat and bedding inside the tent, including JayJay's bedding, and climb in. Let JayJay roam the tent interior and have him lie down on his bedding. (This is also the perfect time to test all your new gear, put sealer on the tent seams, and shake things down.)

Once at camp, follow the campsite rules about pets. JayJay will need to be on a leash anytime he's outside. It's important that he comes back when you call him, if he gets loose. If you're worried about your dog barking at night, try to book a campsite that is farther away from others.

Now Here's A Tip
by JoAnn Derson

• Ice-cube trays can be handy for freezing portions of foods. Try freezing individual servings of baby food. Or clean and snip fresh herbs from your garden. Fill the ice-cube tray with tablespoons of olive oil and tuck the herb snippings into the oil. Then freeze. Whatever you freeze can be popped out and stored in a zipper-top bag.

• There's been a lot of talk at my house about kitchen gadgets that do double duty, especially since I have made whipped cream for the first time – in my coffee-maker! I have a French press that I rarely use, until now. Add heavy whipping cream and a bit of sugar to the pot, and use the screen to whip the cream by rapidly bringing it up and down. Magic!

• "I love to eat pancakes, but I don't have time to make them every morning. I make a very large batch on Sundays and reheat them through the week. In order to re-create that fresh from the pan crisp (which you don't get if you microwave them), I use my toaster." – P.E. in OH

• "I have an extra coffee-pot, which I brew a pot of hot water in. I use the water for both tea and instant oatmeal packets in the morning." – M.S. in Nevada

• Hashbrowns can be made on a waffle iron. Coat liberally with canola oil or butter-flavored nonstick spray, and add shredded potatoes and finely diced onion. Allow the iron to cook the potatoes to your desired level of crispness, and flip out both sides onto a plate. They will be both crisp and soft!
